Daring Burglary. The residence of Mr. John Kent Brown, on Mulberry, between Front and Second streets, was entered some time during Wednesday night and about $100 in money, besides some clothing, and a number of articles that had been purchased for the holidays, were stolen therefrom. The burglar effected an entrance by opening the sash of a window on the first floor and then undoing the fastenings of the window. Mr. Brown's chamber was on the second floor, with the door unlocked and his clothes lying near the door. The clothes were removed and taken off together with a lot of Christmas goods in the dining room below, but the pocket book, minus the money, was found on the floor. Evidently the rascal could read writing, as two checks which it contained, one for $100 and the other for $200, both payable to order, and therefore valueless without Mr. Brown's endorsement, were left in the pocket book. This is one of the most daring burglaries on record in this city and especially so when it is considered that the full moon shone all night. There is no clue to the robber, although it is evident that he was one well acquainted with the premises and with the interior arrangements of the house. It is, perhaps, unfortunate that the checks were made payable to order as the rascal might have been detected, through their agency, in the attempt . to cash them.

Christmas Day in the City. Christmas Day dawned beautiful and bright and the streets from an sed so much of the kindliness, the early hour were crowded with pleasure seekers. Who Laughed? On Christmasnight a party of young men, after being duly accoutred with fire crackers, went around to sainte another young man who was supposed and good will of the donors. be at his repose. On arriving at the house it was found that the front door of the second story was open and only about three feet from it was located the door of the young man's sleeping apartment. The would-be disturbers forthwith set up a continual firing of crackers, making it a point to throw the obnoxious poppers as near the door as possible. They thought it was jolly fun, and expected every moment that the young man who was so seriously disturbed would deliver an oration from one of the windows, or cast out several articles as pressents, such as boot-jacks, old shoes, or empty bottles. The idea tickled them immensely, and they ceased hostilities to enjoy a spell of gleeful laughter. They next tried two or three packs of the explosive crackers, which caused the whole house to with the sounds, but response. As Others See Us. Capt. Fulgham, on the State Agricultura! Journal pays our city a very handsome compliment. After speakhandsome compliment. After speaking of the magnificent harbor at Beaufort, confessedly one of the best on the Atlantic coast, he says : Next in order, as regards natural advantages is the port of Wilmington, our City by the Sea. This is the one sea-port in North Carolina which may be said to be thriving. Prosperity dwells within her borders. Her past is a record of steady growth and progress. Her future is full of promise; and she is rapidly becoming a rival, not to be despised, of Norfolk, and Charleston, and Savannah.

The first city in point of population in North Carolina, Wilmington must become our most important commercial emporium.

The completion of the Carolina Central Railway insures Wilmington's future. It opens up a new region of country tributary to her; places her in direct communication with Charlotte, destined to become the Atlanta of the Carolinias, and gives her another connection with the Southwest.

A broad and liberal policy towards producers and shippers, on the part of the merchants and lords of the city of Wilmington-continued with a spirit of energy and enterprise, would make Wilmington the Hamburg or the Liverpool of the South, and place it alongside of Charleston and Norfolk in magnitude and importance.

The people of Wilmington are noted for their open-handed hospitality; they deserve success; they are worthy of fortune's best favors; and we wish their noble city rapid advancement along the highway of prosperity, power, and grandeur.

The Christmas-Tide.

The harmony of bright skies and bright faces ushers in the joyous season in whose brief days are compresmerriment and the charity overflowsentiment; the clouds have rolled as well as a happy, Xmas Day. It is cosmopolitan, and wherever the light some of the old boys which the festival of Christmas proclaims throughout the world.
